Systems and Variations

Each amplified infrared sound field system includes, in various forms, a wireless receiver with audio amplifier, an infrared sensor, one or more wireless microphones and battery chargers, and a package of speakers, wire and for cut-in ceiling speakers tile bridges to support these speakers. Products are priced lower in systems than individually.

The audio amplifier serves the voice microphones and other audio/visual systems in a classroom. It creates a field of sound to improve student attention and comprehension and teacher's voice quality and health. The amplified sound field systems are based around combination amplifiers/receivers named Maxim, Forum, Spectrum, Matrix, Quantum II, and Ovation.

Full System Part Numbers. The systems on the following pages are defined by (1) the amplifier or receiver that forms their basis, (2) their microphone and charger package, and (3) their speaker package (for amplified systems only). The part numbers for each full system are thus composed of three parts relating to these three defining portions.

Infrared (IR) Systems: A part number appearing as AAA-ABBB/CCD with AAA-A relating to the amplifier or receiver, BBB relating to the microphone package, and CC denoting the speaker type and D the number of speakers included.

DECT Systems: A part number appearing as AAA-BBC-DDE or AAA-BC-DDE, with AAA relating to the amplifier, B or BB relating to the microphone package, C denoting the charger style, DD denoting the speaker type and E the number of speakers included.

Microphone Packages. TeachLogic offers two types of infrared wireless microphones for the systems above, one to be worn on a lanyard for handsfree all-day use and another handheld microphone for students and teachers alike. Both are powered by rechargeable batteries, and our packages include various combinations of microphones, battery chargers, and the required batteries. Each full system includes one of the following microphone/charger combinations.
